I. INTRODUCTION

Metropolitan’s opening brief on the scope of the remand misapplies the law of the case doctrine, and egregiously misstates the law of this case. The law of the case doctrine promotes finality by preventing relitigation of issues already decided. It does not apply to points of law that might have been, but were not, decided in the prior appeal; but it does extend to questions that were implicitly determined because they were essential to the prior decision. (See, e.g., Sargon Enterprises, Inc. v. University of Southern California (2013) 215 Cal.App.4th 1495, 1505.) As the Water Authority explained in its opening brief and explains further below, Metropolitan wrongly seeks to relitigate issues that were already decided, whereas the Water Authority rightly seeks to obtain initial decisions from this Court on issues that have not been decided yet—neither by the Court of Appeal nor the trial court, and neither explicitly nor implicitly.<sup>1</sup>

II. ARGUMENT

A. The Court must award $28,678,191 in WSR damages, plus 10% interest.<sup>2</sup>

As the Water Authority explained in its opening brief, this Court’s task on remand with regard to damages is simple: award the Water Authority $28,678,191, plus interest. This is the amount of “the overcharges attributable to the unlawful inclusion of the water stewardship rate,” for 2011 to 2014—as already proven at trial, decided by Judge Curtis E.A. Karnow, and sustained on appeal. (See 12 Cal.App.5th at p. 1154.) Indeed, Judge Karnow not only awarded this exact <sup>1</sup> These briefs address issues the parties contend this Court should hold further proceedings to decide; they do not address everything that has already been decided and must be included in the final validation judgment and writ of mandate. For example, the Water Authority is indisputably entitled to judgment on the issue of preferential rights. (See SDCWA v. Metropolitan (2017) 12 Cal.App.5th 1124, 1155–1156.) Similarly, it is undisputed that the judgment must declare Metropolitan’s so-called “Rate Structure Integrity,” or “RSI,” clause “invalid and unenforceable.” (Id. at p. 1164). If this Court declines to order equitable monetary restitution for Metropolitan’s enforcement of that unconstitutional provision, the Court should at least declare the Water Authority’s restored eligibility for all benefits it has been wrongfully denied since Metropolitan first imposed this punitive measure on the Water Authority, on June 23, 2011, so that the Water Authority may apply retroactively for those benefits. The writ, moreover, must prohibit Metropolitan from charging its water stewardship rate (“WSR”) as “a component of the wheeling rate and exchange agreement transportation rates,” because doing so violates the wheeling statutes and the common law. (Id. at pp. 1150–1152.) The Water Authority assumes all such matters will be addressed in subsequent briefs about the form of the final judgment and writ.

<sup>2</sup> Although Metropolitan seeks to relitigate other issues it lost on appeal, as discussed below, it apparently does not dispute that the Court of Appeal affirmed Judge Karnow’s ruling that the Water Authority is entitled to 10% prejudgment interest. (See 12 Cal.App.5th at pp. 1154–1155.)

1 amount in WSR damages, but also expressly found that Metropolitan waived its arguments to the 2 contrary. On appeal, Metropolitan tried to revive its waived and meritless challenges to the 3 amount of damages Judge Karnow awarded. But, aside from agreeing with Metropolitan that 4 State Water Project (“SWP”) costs should be subtracted from the prior award—the only issue the 5 Court of Appeal decided in Metropolitan’s favor—the court rejected all of Metropolitan’s 6 arguments: “none is persuasive.” (Ibid., emphasis added.)

7 At trial, the Water Authority proved that the amount of “overcharges on the water 8 stewardship rate,” from 2011 to 2014, is “$28,678,191.” (Tr. 2510:26-28.)<sup>3</sup> Judge Karnow found 9 that this is “a reasonable computation,” and that Metropolitan “did not offer a competing 10 computation.” (SOD II at p. 18.) Indeed, when Judge Karnow asked whether Metropolitan 11 intended to present a competing computation, including any offset, Metropolitan’s trial counsel 12 replied, “Not my problem.” (Tr. 3291:13, emphasis added.) As Judge Karnow warned 13 Metropolitan and ultimately held, however, it was Metropolitan’s burden to prove any offset at 14 trial. (See SOD II at p. 17, fn. 24.) Thus, Judge Karnow awarded the Water Authority exactly the 15 amount of WSR damages it proved: $28,678,191. (See id. at p. 18; Tr. 2510:25-28; PTX-471.)

16 Metropolitan moved for a new trial, belatedly seeking an offset, and arguing that the 17 damages award—including the WSR portion of the award—“exceeds the detriment caused by the 18 alleged breach and gives SDCWA more compensation than it would have received by full 19 performance of the Exchange Agreement.” (New Trial Mot. at pp. 15–17.) These are precisely 20 the same arguments that Metropolitan now proposes to relitigate on remand. (See Metropolitan’s 21 Opening Brief (“MOB”) at pp. 8–13.) But Judge Karnow found these same arguments “plainly 22 waived.” (Dec. 23, 2015 Order at p. 8, emphasis added.) Metropolitan “refused to present a 23 damages calculation or methodology because it hoped that its reasoning would actually lead to a 24 dismissal,” and then reversed its position after losing at trial, seeking “to retry the case.” (Ibid.)

25
26 <sup>3</sup> This is Metropolitan’s WSR per acre-foot (AF) for each of the four years at issue, multiplied by 27 the volume of Exchange Agreement water for those years. In 2011, the WSR was $41/AF, on 28 143,242.90 AF, totaling $5,872,958.90. For 2012, the numbers are: $43/AF x 186,861 AF =
$8,035,023; for 2013: $41/AF x 180,256 AF = $7,390,496; for 2014: $41/AF x 179,993 AF =
$7,379,713. The total is $28,678,191. (See Tr. 2495:1–2511:3; PTX-471; PTX-506–512.)

1 Allowing a retrial “would create exactly the wrong incentives.” (Ibid.) That is still true now.

2 Indeed, Metropolitan itself emphasizes that “issues abandoned at trial as a matter of 3 strategy are waived” on remand. (MOB at p. 19, citing De Angeles v. Roos Bros., Inc. (1966) 244 4 Cal.App.2d 434, 442–443, emphasis added.) In De Angeles, the court stated that it “would be 5 hard pressed to imagine a more emphatic and complete waiver of the issue of mitigation” of 6 damages, because the defendants there not only failed to introduce any evidence to prove such an 7 offset, their attorney “flatly stated” that the defendants purposely refrained from introducing such 8 evidence. (244 Cal.App.2d at p. 442.) “It is one thing to allow a litigant on appeal to reopen a 9 simple factual matter subject to easy computation where it is inadvertently omitted below,” but 10 “quite another matter to extricate a litigant who, as a matter of strategy and purely for his own 11 advantage, has chosen to abandon a material issue at the trial level.” (Ibid.)

12 Metropolitan’s waiver was at least as “emphatic and complete.” (Ibid.) Judge Karnow 13 gave Metropolitan every opportunity to present its damages theories at trial, but Metropolitan 14 refused, not because of inadvertence or mistake, but based on its deliberate trial strategy, as Judge 15 Karnow explicitly found. (Dec. 23, 2015 Order at p. 7.) Where, as here, such a strategy “results 16 in an outcome disappointing to the advocate, the lawyer may not use that tactical decision as the 17 basis to claim prejudicial error.” (Ibid., quoting Mesecher v. County of San Diego (1992) 9 18 Cal.App.4th 1677, 1686.) As in De Angeles, it is “not in the interest of justice to allow appellants 19 to play fast and loose with the decisional process by now granting a second trial on the issue of 20 damages.” (244 Cal.App.2d at p. 443.) To permit such a “change in the theory of a defense to a 21 suit for damages based upon the breach of a written contract, after an unfavorable reversal of a 22 judgment on appeal, would create a dangerous precedent which might encourage deception and 23 injustice.” (Dressler v. Johnston (1933) 131 Cal.App. 690, 697.)

24 In any case, Metropolitan’s damages arguments are not only waived, but prohibited by the 25 law of the case. On appeal, Metropolitan argued that Judge Karnow erred by refusing to reopen 26 damages discovery and refusing to grant a damages retrial. (See Appellant’s Opening Brief 27 (“AOB”) at pp. 114–130; Appellant’s Reply Brief (“ARB”) at pp. 100–114.) But the Court of 28 Appeal rejected Metropolitan’s arguments. As the Court of Appeal held, because “the price

1 Metropolitan charged the Water Authority for wheeling was based on an unlawful rate,” 2 Metropolitan breached the Exchange Agreement. (12 Cal.App.5th at p. 1154.) “Since the water 3 stewardship rate was unlawfully charged for the conveyance of water,” the Water Authority is 4 “entitled to recover damages” for “the overcharges attributable to the unlawful inclusion of the 5 water stewardship rate.” (Ibid.) The Court of Appeal further held that “Metropolitan has made 6 several assertions on appeal denying an enforceable contract and actionable breach but none is 7 persuasive.” (Ibid.) Those arguments included Metropolitan’s challenges to the established 8 amount of unlawful WSR overcharges, which Metropolitan now proposes to relitigate on remand.
9 (Compare MOB at pp. 8–13, with AOB at pp. 114–130, and ARB at pp. 100–114.) Because 10 Metropolitan’s arguments failed on appeal, however, they cannot be relitigated on remand. (See, 11 e.g., Sargon, supra, 215 Cal.App.4th at pp. 1505–1506.)

12         Indeed, Metropolitan concedes that where, as here, the Court of Appeal remands “with 13 directions to determine damages in accordance with the rules set forth in its opinion and to enter 14 judgment for the plaintiff, the trial court is bound by the directions given and has no authority to 15 retry any other issue or to make any other findings.” (MOB at p. 15, quoting Rice v. Schmid 16 (1944) 25 Cal.2d 259, 263.) “Any proceedings had or judgment rendered contrary to such 17 specific directions would be void.” (Ibid., quoting Carter v. Superior Court (1950) 96 18 Cal.App.2d 388, 391.) In Carter, for example, the case had been remanded for the trial court to 19 determine damages for the plaintiff, but the trial court allowed the defendant to pursue claims for 20 an offset. That was error because the remand did not mention any offset, and there was “no 21 reason to doubt that the court intended to confine further proceedings in the trial court” to the 22 plaintiff’s damages, as opposed to the defendant’s offset. (96 Cal.App.2d at p. 392.) The same is 23 true here a fortiori. Whereas the offset issue in Carter was “entirely foreign to the issues that had 24 been litigated and which were under review on appeal” (ibid.), Metropolitan explicitly raised on 25 appeal the offset issue it now seeks to relitigate on remand, and expressly sought a retrial and 26 further discovery, but the Court of Appeal rejected all of Metropolitan’s arguments. Thus, the 27 damages discovery and retrial Metropolitan seeks now “would be void.” (Id. at p. 391.)<sup>4</sup>

28 <sup>4</sup> Unlike Metropolitan, the Water Authority does not seek to relitigate or retry damages, nor does

1 Metropolitan tries to evade the terms of the remand by misstating it, asserting that the 2 Court of Appeal granted “the relief requested by” Metropolitan—namely, a “remand for a retrial 3 on damages.” (MOB at p. 11, quoting AOB at p. 119, fn. 28.) But that is false. Instead of 4 remanding “for a retrial on damages,” as Metropolitan requested (ibid.), the Court of Appeal
5 remanded “for recalculation of damages” limited to the WSR overcharges plus interest—i.e., 6 subtracting the SWP charges from the prior damages award. (12 Cal.App.5th at p. 1166.)
7 Contrary to Metropolitan’s unsupported assertions, that was not a remand for a “retrial.” For 8 example, in Frankel v. Four Star International, Inc. (1980) 104 Cal.App.3d 897, 902, the court 9 held that “redetermination of the amount of the award” meant redetermination “from the evidence 10 previously introduced.” Like Metropolitan, the defendant in Frankel had moved to reopen the 11 case “for the purpose of introducing additional evidence on the issue of mitigation of damages,” 12 but the appellate court upheld the trial court’s denial of that motion. (Id. at p. 903.) “This 13 holding made clear that the evidence presented at the first trial on the issue of damages was full 14 and complete,” and that the remand to redetermine damages was not a remand for “a retrial on the 15 issue of breach-of-contract damages.” (Ibid.) Similarly, in South Bay Senior Housing Corp. v.
16 City of Hawthorne (1997) 56 Cal.App.4th 1231, 1237, the court explicitly distinguished between 17 recalculation and retrial, remanding “with directions to recalculate the amount of damages, if 18 possible,” and to conduct a retrial only to the extent recalculation was not possible. And in 19 Sanchez v. Brooke (2012) 204 Cal.App.4th 126, 143, the court made clear that “recalculation of 20 damages” did not require a retrial, but only “a limited hearing.” By contrast, when the Court of 21 Appeal intends to remand for a retrial on damages, it says so explicitly—especially where, as 22 here, the appellant moved in the trial court for a retrial, and then argued for a retrial on appeal.

it seek to reopen discovery on that or any other issue. As discussed below, the Water Authority does not seek additional damages, but a writ of mandate that Metropolitan must comply with its statutory duty to determine the reasonable credit for offsetting benefits, and equitable restitution for the enforcement of the unconstitutional RSI clause. Those issues are well within the scope of the remand, whereas Metropolitan’s proposal to reopen discovery and retry damages is not. Also, Metropolitan’s offset theory depends on the purported “legality of the water stewardship fee as a component of Metropolitan’s full-service water rate,” a question the Court of Appeal declined to decide. (12 Cal.App.5th at p. 1152, fn. 16.) This further shows that the Court of Appeal did not intend to resuscitate Metropolitan’s waived and meritless offset theory; if that had been the court’s intent, it would have decided that legality issue, which is the sine qua non of any offset.

1 (See, e.g., Ayyad v. Sprint Spectrum, L.P. (2012) 210 Cal.App.4th 851, 857; Hill v. San Jose
2 Family Housing Partners, LLC (2011) 198 Cal.App.4th 764, 780.)

3 Metropolitan further misstates the record in arguing that the “Court of Appeal was aware 4 of the component of damages attributable to the WSR, but declined SDCWA’s invitation to 5 affirm the damages figure attributable to the WSR, and instead remanded for a ‘redetermination 6 of damages.’” (MOB at pp. 10–11, citation omitted.) In fact, the Water Authority did not 7 separately identify the amount of WSR damages on appeal, because the Water Authority “asked 8 the Court of Appeal simply to affirm the [entire] damages award.” (Id. at p. 10.) Nor is there any 9 basis for Metropolitan’s assertion that the Court of Appeal was “aware of the damages figure 10 attributable to the WSR.” (Ibid.) Metropolitan cites footnote 9 of the appellate opinion for that 11 proposition, but that footnote only states the WSR for 2011, and does not state the volume of 12 water delivered under the Exchange Agreement in that or any other year. (See 12 Cal.App.5th at 13 p. 1141, fn. 9.) To calculate damages, one must know the WSR for each of the four years at 14 issue, and the volume of water delivered under the Exchange Agreement in those years. (See 15 PTX-471.) As explained above, the Water Authority presented that calculation at trial, and Judge 16 Karnow decided that the Water Authority proved WSR damages of $28,678,191, plus 10 percent 17 prejudgment interest. (See ibid.; SOD II at p. 18; Oct. 9, 2015 Order.) Because that amount was 18 not identified for the Court of Appeal, however, it remanded for this Court to redetermine 19 damages and recalculate 10 percent interest based on the proven WSR overcharges. (See 12 20 Cal.App.5th at pp. 1154–1155.) Metropolitan argues that if the Court of Appeal had not intended 21 a retrial “its remand instruction would have so stated” (MOB at p. 10), but the opposite is true. If 22 the court had agreed with any of Metropolitan’s arguments for reopening discovery and retrying 23 the case, it would have said so. Instead, it remanded for a “redetermination,” which, as in 24 Frankel, is limited to “the evidence presented at the first trial.” (104 Cal.App.3d at pp. 902–903.)

25 Nevertheless, Metropolitan seeks to reopen discovery to relitigate whether the Water 26 Authority is entitled to “any” damages. (MOB at p. 8.) But that is plainly barred by the remand 27 and the law of the case that the “Water Authority is entitled to recover damages.” (12 28 Cal.App.5th at p. 1154.) Moreover, any discovery in pursuit of Metropolitan’s attempt to reduce

1 damages below $28,678,191, plus interest, is also barred, because that is the amount of 2 “overcharges attributable to the unlawful inclusion” of the WSR in Metropolitan’s charges “for 3 the conveyance of water” pursuant to the Exchange Agreement—which, as discussed above, was 4 proved and decided at trial, and sustained on appeal. (Ibid.; see also SOD II at p. 18; PTX-471.)

5 None of Metropolitan’s cases support its contention that discovery may be reopened. In 6 Fairmont Ins. Co. v. Superior Court (2000) 22 Cal.4th 245, 247, and Hirano v. Hirano (2007)
7 158 Cal.App.4th 1, 8, discovery was reopened automatically because those cases were remanded
8 for trial. And in Guzman v. Superior Court (1993) 19 Cal.App.4th 705, 707, the trial court itself
9 granted “a new damages trial.” Here, as already discussed, the trial court denied Metropolitan’s 10 motions to reopen discovery and for a new trial, and the Court of Appeal rejected Metropolitan’s 11 challenges to those rulings. This Court, therefore, must likewise deny Metropolitan’s requests to 12 reopen discovery and retry damages. (See, e.g., Frankel, supra, 104 Cal.App.3d at p. 903.)

13 B. The Court must issue a new writ, and should direct Metropolitan to 14 determine the “reasonable credit” required by Water Code § 1811(c).

15 As the Water Authority explained in its opening brief, this Court is required by statute to 16 issue a “peremptory mandate . . . without delay.” (Code Civ. Proc., § 1095; see also Oct. 30, 17 2015 Order at pp. 1–2 [“[B]ecause the underlying action was for writ of mandate, and because 18 judgment [must be] entered in [the Water Authority’s] favor, a peremptory writ of mandate, too, 19 should now issue.”].) Metropolitan does not seem to dispute this—nor can it reasonably do so, 20 given that it conceded the point before Judge Karnow. (See Tr. 3331:25–3332:8.) Yet 21 Metropolitan repeatedly and mistakenly contends that “the Court of Appeal held the wheeling rate 22 was lawful, except to the extent it included the WSR in the years 2011-2014.” (MOB at pp. 18, 23 22.) The Court of Appeal held no such thing. On the contrary, it held that Metropolitan’s 24 wheeling rate is unlawful—not just for 2011 to 2014, but ever since, and for as long as it still 25 includes the WSR, or any other such charge to fund “payments to its members to encourage water 26 conservation,” because such charges are “outside the scope of recoverable costs contemplated by 27 the wheeling statutes,” and their “inclusion as a component of the wheeling rate and exchange 28 agreement transportation rates is also unlawful under the common law.” (12 Cal.App.5th at 1 pp. 1150–1152, emphases added.) Until Metropolitan’s conveyance rates exclude all such 2 charges, those rates will remain unlawful under the law of this case. (See ibid.) Accordingly, a 3 “peremptory mandate” must issue “without delay,” commanding Metropolitan to cure its 4 violations of the Wheeling Statutes and the common law. (See ibid.; Code Civ. Proc., § 1095.)

5 Metropolitan continues to try to evade its duties under the Wheeling Statutes and the law 6 of this case by repeatedly asserting that the Court of Appeal “held that the amended Exchange 7 Agreement is not a wheeling agreement.” (MOB at p. 5; see also id. at pp. 2–4.) But that is not 8 the court’s holding. The court noted that “wheeling and exchange agreements are not the same,” 9 but nonetheless agreed with Judge Karnow in holding that the legality of all of the conveyance 10 rates at issue—not just the wheeling rate, but specifically including all of the rates Metropolitan 11 charges under the Exchange Agreement, is “determined under the wheeling statutes.” (12 12 Cal.App.5th at pp. 1136, 1144, emphasis added.) Metropolitan agreed to charge “standard water 13 rates, lawfully set.” (Id. at p. 1136.) With regard to SWP costs, the court expressly relied on the 14 Wheeling Statutes in holding that, because “these costs are incurred by Metropolitan, so too must 15 they be recovered.” (Id. at p. 1147, citing Wat. Code, § 1811, subd. (c).) And, with regard to the 16 WSR, the court expressly relied on the same statutory provision in holding that Metropolitan’s 17 “payments to its members to encourage water conservation is outside the scope of recoverable 18 costs contemplated by the wheeling statutes.” (Id. at p. 1150.) The court explicitly affirmed 19 Judge Karnow’s ruling that “to the extent that the price Metropolitan charged the Water Authority 20 for wheeling was based on an unlawful rate, there was a breach of the amended exchange 21 agreement.” (Id. at p. 1154, emphasis added.) “That construction of the contract has been 22 adjudicated and becomes the law of this case.” (Dressler, supra, 131 Cal.App. at pp. 695–696.)

23 It is remarkable that Metropolitan, in its attempt to avoid its statutory duty to determine 24 the reasonable credit for offsetting benefits, would contend to this Court that it need not comply 25 with the statutory requirements for “fair compensation” in Water Code section 1811, subdivision 26 (c). The appellate opinion is expressly predicated on precisely that section and subdivision of the 27 Wheeling Statutes, citing and applying it no less than six times, including in the part of its 28 opinion holding that “fair compensation” may include Metropolitan’s SWP costs—the one issue

1 on which Metropolitan prevailed on appeal. (See 12 Cal.App.5th at pp. 1144, 1147, 1150, 1151.)
2 Metropolitan violates not only the law of this case but basic principles of responsible advocacy by 3 continuing to argue that this statutory provision does not apply. In particular, Metropolitan 4 persists in offering its revisionist history of the Exchange Agreement and the consideration the 5 Water Authority purportedly received, and relying on self-serving language Metropolitan put into 6 its administrative code. (See MOB at pp. 3–5, 15–16, fn. 12.) But Judge Karnow and the Court
7 of Appeal rejected Metropolitan’s contentions about those topics because “none is persuasive.” 8 (12 Cal.App.5th at p. 1154, emphasis added; cf. AOB at pp. 114–130; ARB at pp. 100–114; see 9 also SOD II at pp. 5–25; Water Authority’s Phase II Post-Trial Brief at pp. 11–19; Water
10 Authority’s Responding and Opening Brief on Appeal at pp. 31–33, 75–82.) Metropolitan’s 11 intransigence violates the law of this case, and this Court should put an end to it.

12         The writ of mandate must order Metropolitan to comply with its statutory duty to charge 13 only lawful conveyance rates limited to “fair compensation,” which, under the law of this case, 14 must exclude the WSR. (12 Cal.App.5th at pp. 1150–1152, 1154.) “Fair compensation” also 15 must include “reasonable credit for any offsetting benefits for the use of the conveyance system.”
16 (Id. at p. 1144, quoting Wat. Code, § 1811, subd. (c).) Metropolitan must determine that 17 “reasonable credit” in a timely and “reasonable manner consistent with the requirements of law to 18 facilitate the voluntary sale, lease, or exchange of water.” (Wat. Code, §§ 1810–1813.) On 19 remand, this Court certainly has the jurisdiction—and, indeed, the duty—to mandate 20 Metropolitan’s compliance with its statutory obligations. (See California Trout, Inc. v. Superior 21 Court (1990) 218 Cal.App.3d 187, 201–213.) This is particularly imperative given 22 Metropolitan’s refusal to acknowledge the law of this case regarding “fair compensation,” and its 23 clear intent to persist in its “ongoing violation of [that] statutory mandate.” (See id. at p. 203.)

24         Metropolitan’s argument to the contrary relies, first, on the Rice and Carter cases. (See 25 MOB at p. 15.) But those cases are only relevant to the judgment for damages. As already 26 discussed, it is Metropolitan, not the Water Authority, that seeks to “retry” damages contrary to 27 the Court of Appeal’s “specific directions.” (Rice, supra, 25 Cal.2d at p. 263; Carter, 96 28 Cal.App.2d at p. 391.) The relief the Water Authority seeks with regard to the “reasonable credit

1 for any offsetting benefits” is not damages. Instead, the Water Authority simply asks this Court 2 to mandate that Metropolitan must itself act to determine that credit in the first instance. That 3 writ relief—like the equitable RSI relief the Water Authority seeks, as discussed below, but 4 unlike Metropolitan’s improper request to reopen discovery and retry damages—is fully 5 consistent with entry of a judgment for damages consisting of “the overcharges attributable to the 6 unlawful inclusion of the water stewardship rate.” (12 Cal.App.5th at p. 1154.)

7 With regard to the writ, the relevant language from the appellate disposition is not the 8 remand for recalculation of damages, but the remand for “other proceedings consistent with the 9 views expressed in [the] opinion.” (Id. at p. 1166.) That returns jurisdiction to this Court to grant 10 the requested relief and to “close the whole controversy.” (Raun v. Reynolds (1860) 15 Cal. 459, 11 472; see also, e.g., Pillsbury v. Superior Court (1937) 8 Cal.2d 469, 471–472; California Trout, 12 supra, 218 Cal.App.3d at pp. 201–213.) This Court is bound by the law of the case, of course, 13 but that “does not apply to points of law that might have been determined, but were not decided in 14 the prior appeal.” (Sargon, supra, 215 Cal.App.4th at p. 1505.) The Court of Appeal did not 15 decide in the prior appeal whether this Court should issue a writ mandating Metropolitan’s 16 compliance with its statutory duty to determine the reasonable credit for offsetting benefits. But 17 what it did decide, i.e., that the wheeling law applies, fully supports the Water Authority’s request 18 for a writ consistent with the appellate opinion. That opinion certainly does not preclude the 19 requested writ, as Metropolitan wrongly contends. On the contrary, the Court of Appeal not only 20 held that Metropolitan’s charges under the Exchange Agreement must comply with the statutory 21 definition of “fair compensation,” but also stated that this requires “reasonable credit for any 22 offsetting benefits for the use of the conveyance system.” (12 Cal.App.5th at p. 1144, quoting 23 Wat. Code, § 1811, subd. (c).) That specific requirement is not mentioned in the remittitur, but 24 that does not deprive this Court of the jurisdiction to issue the requested writ, which is entirely 25 consistent with the appellate opinion. Indeed, as in California Trout, this Court not only has the 26 jurisdiction but the obligation to mandate compliance with statutory obligations, including in 27 ways not explicitly spelled out in the remittitur. (See 218 Cal.App.3d at pp. 201–213 & fn. 2.)

28 Metropolitan contends that its contrary position “is confirmed by the Court of Appeal’s

1 treatment of SDCWA’s petition for rehearing” (MOB at p. 18), but a decision not to rehear the 2 appeal does not in any way diminish this Court’s power and duty to prohibit “the ongoing 3 violation of a statutory mandate.” (California Trout, supra, 218 Cal.App.3d at p. 203.) “Nor is 4 the claim tenable that” the remittitur, which expressly allows for other proceedings consistent 5 with the views expressed in the Court of Appeal’s opinion, somehow “tied the hands” of this 6 Court regarding appropriate writ relief. (See id. at p. 202, fn. 2.) Metropolitan’s reliance on the 7 California Supreme Court’s denial of the Water Authority’s petition for review is similarly 8 misplaced. The courts have repeatedly warned against “attempting to draw meaning from the 9 Supreme Court’s denial of hearing.” (Jennings v. Superior Court (1980) 104 Cal.App.3d 50, 57.)

10 Metropolitan also contends that the issue of reasonable credit for offsetting benefits was 11 implicitly decided against the Water Authority because the Court of Appeal addressed specific 12 challenges to the validity of Metropolitan’s conveyance rates. (MOB at pp. 21–22.) In deciding 13 those challenges to Metropolitan’s allocation of SWP and WSR costs (ruling for Metropolitan as 14 to the former, but for the Water Authority as to the latter, and everything else), the Court of 15 Appeal did not rule on other invalidity issues that “might have been determined, but were not 16 decided.” (Sargon, supra, 215 Cal.App.4th at p. 1505.) Again, to the extent the Court of Appeal 17 specifically addressed reasonable credit for offsetting benefits, it noted that “fair compensation” 18 must include such credit. (12 Cal.App.5th at p. 1144.) Moreover, as Metropolitan itself 19 apparently recognizes, this and the prior case about Metropolitan’s wheeling rates addressed the 20 facial invalidity of those rates, but that is a distinct issue from their invalidity “as applied,” which 21 may be addressed after resolution of the parties’ disputes about the rates’ facial invalidity. (See 22 MOB at pp. 15–16, fn. 12, quoting Metropolitan v. IID (2000) 80 Cal.App.4th 1403, 1434 (IID), 23 Metropolitan’s emphasis.) Now that the Court of Appeal has finally resolved the parties’ 24 longstanding disputes about the facial invalidity of Metropolitan’s conveyance rates, Metropolitan 25 must, at long last, “modify” those rates “as applied” to account for “offsetting benefits.” (See 26 ibid.; IID, supra, 80 Cal.App.4th at p. 1434.) Metropolitan’s reasons for refusing to do so in the 27 past—in particular, its intransigent argument that the wheeling law does not apply to the 28 Exchange Agreement—were rejected by the Court of Appeal. (See 12 Cal.App.5th at pp. 1144,

1 1150–1151, 1154.) The issue is now ripe for determination. And, as discussed at length in the 2 Water Authority’s opening brief (pp. 4, 7, 22–23), Metropolitan’s own resolution regarding “fair 3 compensation” expressly promises that Metropolitan’s “wheeling rates shall be reduced to reflect 4 the regional water supply benefits,” which “shall be calculated by Metropolitan in the same 5 manner as such benefits are calculated for” other conservation projects. (AR2449 § 10.)

6 Metropolitan further contends that the Water Authority waived the issue of reasonable 7 credit for offsetting benefits, but that contention is frivolous. Unlike Metropolitan—which, as 8 discussed above, Judge Karnow expressly found to have waived precisely the same damages 9 arguments it now seeks to relitigate, after failing to revive those same waived arguments on 10 appeal—the Water Authority never waived the issue of reasonable credit for offsetting benefits.
11 On the contrary, the Water Authority petitioned for a writ on the basis that, among other 12 violations, Metropolitan’s conveyance rates exceed “fair compensation.” (2010 Case Third Am.
13 Compl. ¶¶ 72, 96, 101; 2012 Case Compl. ¶¶ 73, 98, 103.) The Water Authority thus “pled and 14 established the facts undergirding a primary right,” and this Court has the power to grant “an 15 appropriate remedy,” even if it was “not made the subject of the prayer” or the remittitur.
16 (California Trout, supra, 218 Cal.App.3d at p. 204; see also id. at p. 202, fn. 2.)<sup>5</sup> Moreover, 17 although Metropolitan falsely suggests that the issue of reasonable credit for offsetting benefits 18 was “not presented to the trial court” (MOB at p. 19, citation omitted), in fact, the Water 19 Authority presented this issue in both phases of trial. (Phase I Post-Trial Br. at pp. 47–48; Phase 20 II Post-Trial Br. at pp. 9, 21–23, 32–33; Tr. 1246:18–1250:18.) After prevailing at trial—
21 obtaining a judgment that invalidated all of Metropolitan’s conveyance rates in their entirety, 22 and awarded nearly $200 million in damages—the Water Authority was not required to object to 23 Judge Karnow’s decisions in its favor.<sup>6</sup> Nor was the Water Authority required to raise the issue

24 _____
25 <sup>5</sup> Although amendment is unnecessary, it is also worth noting that “proceedings not inconsistent 26 with the views expressed by the District Court of Appeal may in a proper case contemplate the 27 granting of permission to file an amended pleading.” (Pillsbury, supra, 8 Cal.2d at p. 472.)

28 <sup>6</sup> Metropolitan’s argument to the contrary relies on In re Marriage of Arceneaux (1990) 51 Cal.3d 1130, but that case held that failure to object to a statement of decision “results in drawing the inference in favor of the prevailing party.” (Id. at p. 1136.) As the prevailing party, the Water Authority was not required to object to inferences in its own favor, and did not waive anything.

1 of reasonable credit on appeal. (See Water Authority’s Opening Brief on Remand at pp. 20–23; 2 Atchison, T. & S. F. R. Co. v. Superior Court (1939) 12 Cal.2d 549, 550–557; California Trout,
3 supra, 218 Cal.App.3d at p. 204; Brookhouser v. California (1992) 10 Cal.App.4th 1665, 1681–
4 1682.) But now, in light of the Court of Appeal’s opinion resolving the parties’ facial invalidity 5 disputes, reasonable credit for offsetting benefits must be determined.

6 Thus, the writ must command Metropolitan to charge only “fair compensation” for 7 conveyance, which must exclude the WSR, under the law of this case, and also must include 8 “reasonable credit for any offsetting benefits,” which Metropolitan must determine in a timely 9 and “reasonable manner consistent with the requirements of law to facilitate the voluntary sale, 10 lease, or exchange of water.” (See 12 Cal.App.5th at p. 1144; Wat. Code, §§ 1810–1813.)

11 C. The Court must enter declaratory relief for the Water Authority on the RSI 12 clause, and that relief properly includes equitable restitution.

13 The Court of Appeal reversed Judge Karnow’s summary adjudication for Metropolitan on 14 its RSI clause, and remanded for “entry of declaratory relief on the Rate Structure Integrity clause 15 . . . and other proceedings consistent with the views expressed in this opinion.” (12 Cal.App.5th 16 at p. 1166.) According to Metropolitan, the upshot of this ruling that the Water Authority is 17 entitled to declaratory relief on the RSI clause is somehow that the Water Authority is not entitled 18 to the declaratory relief it actually sought, which included restitution of all rights and benefits of 19 which it was wrongfully deprived by Metropolitan’s enforcement of its RSI clause.

20 Metropolitan’s nonsensical argument is contrary to established law. “Even if the reviewing court 21 has not ordered restitution, the trial court whose order or judgment has been reversed on 22 appeal has the inherent authority to afford restitutionary relief.” (Beach Break Equities, LLC v.
23 Lowell (2016) 6 Cal.App.5th 847, 852, emphasis added.) Metropolitan enforced its 24 unconstitutional RSI clause for more than six years, and does not even pretend to be able or 25 willing to restore now the benefits it wrongfully denied the Water Authority in those past years, 26 so the Water Authority is entitled to an equitable “money judgment sufficient to compensate for 27 property or rights not restored.” (Ibid., citation omitted; cf. MOB at p. 8, fn. 8.)

28 This principle was established in Raun v. Reynolds, supra, 15 Cal. 459. In an earlier

1 appeal, the California Supreme Court had reversed a decree of foreclosure and held that a sale
2 made pursuant to the foreclosure should be set aside. “The question as to rents and profits 3 received,” however, “was not passed upon . . . because the amount was considerable, and the 4 point had not been fully argued.” (Id. at p. 468.) On remand, the trial court ordered restitution, 5 “appointing a referee to take an account of the rents and profits.” (Ibid.) That order was 6 challenged in a second appeal as, in effect, a new award of damages beyond the scope of the 7 remand. (See id. at pp. 461–462). But the Supreme Court held that its omission of the issue of 8 rents and profits from its remittitur “did not prevent [the trial court] from taking such a course of 9 proceedings as would give full effect to the principles of the opinion of this Court.” (Id. at 468, 10 emphasis in original.) The trial court, therefore, did not err in granting additional equitable relief 11 on remand. “Upon a mere question of remedy, the right being clear, we do not feel inclined 12 unnecessarily to complicate and prolong this protracted controversy by affirming a right, and then 13 doing justice piecemeal by sending the petitioners to another forum for the determination of this 14 matter of account,” which “may be considered not so much as compensation, as restitution.” (Id.
15 at p. 469.) Thus, the trial court properly exercised its equity jurisdiction to “close the whole 16 controversy, by settling and adjusting the accounts of these parties.” (Id. at p. 472.)

17 Raun refutes Metropolitan’s assertion that the relief the Water Authority seeks on remand 18 is an “improper request for restitutionary damages,” which, according to Metropolitan, is 19 inconsistent with the Court of Appeal’s remand for “a redetermination of damages based solely 20 on overcharges from inclusion of the Water Stewardship Rate.” (MOB at p. 24, quoting 12 21 Cal.App.5th at p. 1154, Metropolitan’s emphasis.) As in Raun, the equitable relief the Water 22 Authority seeks is not damages, or “compensation,” but “restitution.” (Raun, supra, 15 Cal. at p.
23 469.) Equitable restitution is well within the scope of the remand for “entry of declaratory relief” 24 on the RSI clause, “and other proceedings consistent with the views expressed in [the Court of 25 Appeal’s] opinion.” (12 Cal.App.5th at p. 1166; see Raun, supra, 15 Cal. at p. 468 [equitable 26 relief not specifically addressed in the opinion or remittitur was nonetheless “in pursuance of the 27 principles of the opinion”]; see also, e.g., Beach Break, supra, 6 Cal.App.5th at pp. 852–855.)

28 Metropolitan admits that the Water Authority stated a claim for an order reinstating

1 terminated contracts and “directing Metropolitan to restore the Water Authority’s eligibility for 2 any lawful Metropolitan subsidy program,” yet Metropolitan insists the Water Authority “wholly 3 failed to ever plead or otherwise raise a claim for restitution or an injunction.” (MOB at pp. 24– 4 25.) That makes no sense. The Water Authority’s claim for relief reinstating contracts and 5 directing Metropolitan to restore eligibility is a claim for restitution and injunctive relief.
6 Declaratory relief is not limited to declarations of rights, but may include “other relief.” (Code 7 Civ. Proc., § 1060). That includes the relief the Water Authority prayed for, as well as the 8 equitable monetary relief it seeks now, to the extent the relief it prayed for is no longer feasible.
9 Such relief “falls well within the provision of the section allowing ‘a declaration of rights or 10 duties, either alone or with other relief.’” (Tolle v. Struve (1932) 124 Cal.App. 263, 269, court’s 11 emphasis, quoting § 1060.) “The complaint having stated a cause of action for declaratory 12 relief,” this Court has “jurisdiction of the entire matter and jurisdiction to render the money 13 judgment.” (California Bank v. Diamond (1956) 144 Cal.App.2d 387, 390, emphasis added.)

14 Metropolitan also argues that the Water Authority “made a strategic decision to pursue 15 more narrow relief” in its motion for summary adjudication (MOB at p. 24), but that is wrong.
16 The Water Authority’s summary adjudication brief did not purport to set forth everything the 17 declaratory judgment should include. Nothing in that brief limited the Water Authority’s 18 remedies for Metropolitan’s enforcement of its unconstitutional RSI clause. That brief certainly 19 does not contain any “emphatic and complete waiver” of the relief the Water Authority specified 20 in its complaint—unlike in De Angeles, on which Metropolitan mistakenly relies, which describes 21 Metropolitan’s own waiver of its damages arguments, as discussed above, but bears no
22 resemblance to anything in the Water Authority’s brief. (See 244 Cal.App.2d at pp. 442–443.)

23 On the contrary, in its summary adjudication brief—which, again, did not purport to set 24 forth the form of the ultimate judgment, much less waive any of the relief specified in the 25 complaint—the Water Authority not only asked the trial court to invalidate the RSI clause, but to 26 order Metropolitan “to cease enforcing it.” (MOB at pp. 24–25, quoting Water Authority Br. at p.
27 16.) Because the trial court erroneously granted summary adjudication for Metropolitan, 28 however, Metropolitan continued enforcing its unconstitutional RSI clause, depriving the Water

1 Authority of benefits that, again, Metropolitan does not suggest it is able or willing to restore.
2 Thus, the proper and well-established equitable remedy is restitution in the form of “a money
3 judgment.” (Beach Break, supra, 6 Cal.App.5th at p. 852, citation omitted; see also, e.g., Raun, 4 supra, 15 Cal. at pp. 468–469; Stockton Theatres, Inc. v. Palermo (1953) 121 Cal.App.2d 616, 5 621–622 [upholding award “of the profits of the business, as well as a restitution of the physical 6 property involved,” because “no less a measure of recovery would have been responsive to the 7 just demands” of the plaintiff]; accord Erickson v. Boothe (1954) 127 Cal.App.2d 644, 650.)

8 Metropolitan also asserts that Judge Karnow’s summary adjudication order “emphasizes 9 that any issues not reached below were due to SDCWA’s own narrowing of its requested relief in 10 seeking summary adjudication of its RSI cause of action.” (MOB at p. 25, fn. 13.) Metropolitan 11 cites nothing in support of that assertion, because nothing in Judge Karnow’s order supports it.
12 On the contrary, Judge Karnow found that, if the Water Authority has standing—which it does, as 13 the Court of Appeal held, and as is now the law of the case—the Water Authority “wins on the 14 merits of the claim.” (Dec. 4, 2013 Order at p. 15.) Nothing in Judge Karnow’s order indicates 15 that, having won on the merits of its claim, the Water Authority is not entitled to the relief it 16 explicitly prayed for in that claim. The Water Authority is entitled to that relief, as the Court of 17 Appeal held. (See 12 Cal.App.5th at p. 1166.) And, again, to the extent the rights specifically 18 identified in the Water Authority’s claim for declaratory relief can no longer be restored, the 19 proper equitable remedy is “a money judgment.” (Beach Break, supra, 6 Cal.App.5th at p. 852.)

20 There is also no merit to Metropolitan’s argument that, on appeal, the Water Authority 21 somehow waived its right to restitution. The issue on appeal was whether Judge Karnow erred in 22 ruling that the Water Authority lacks standing to pursue the declaratory relief pleaded in its 23 complaint. The Court of Appeal held that the Water Authority has standing, and remanded for 24 “entry of declaratory relief on the Rate Structure Integrity clause . . . and other proceedings 25 consistent with the views expressed in this opinion.” (12 Cal.App.5th at p. 1166.) The Water 26 Authority did not waive, nor did the Court of Appeal limit, the full scope of relief the Water 27 Authority expressly prayed for in its claim for “declaratory relief on the Rate Structure Integrity 28 clause.” (Ibid.; see Operative 2010 Petition/Complaint ¶ 110.) Nor did the Water Authority

1 waive its right to equitable monetary restitution for “rights not restored.” (Beach Break, supra, 6 2 Cal.App.5th at p. 852.) The Water Authority is clearly entitled to that relief, even though “the 3 reviewing court has not ordered restitution.” (Ibid.)

4 Metropolitan argues that the Court of Appeal “implicitly decided” that the Water 5 Authority is not entitled to the declaratory relief it seeks because denying that relief is somehow 6 “essential to the decision on the prior appeal.” (MOB at p. 26, quoting Estate of Horman (1971) 7 5 Cal.3d 62, 73.) As in Horman, however, the full scope of declaratory relief on remand “was not 8 raised by either party and was not expressly determined by the court. Neither can it fairly be said 9 that determination of the issue was essential to the decision.” (5 Cal.3d at p. 74.) Nothing in the 10 remand or the law of the case precludes equitable restitution here. On the contrary, equity 11 requires it. (See, e.g., Beach Break, supra, 6 Cal.App.5th at pp. 852–855.)<sup>7</sup>

12 Finally, if for any reason this Court does not allow equitable monetary restitution, it 13 should, at the very least, restore the Water Authority’s eligibility for subsidies as of June 23, 2011
14 (the date the Water Authority’s eligibility was unconstitutionally revoked), so that the Water 15 Authority can retroactively apply for such benefits. Otherwise, Metropolitan will surely receive 16 an unconscionable windfall, contrary to the principles of equity and the law of this case.

17 III. CONCLUSION

18 Accordingly, this Court should conduct further proceedings on remand as described above 19 and in the Water Authority’s opening brief, followed by a final judgment and writ of mandate, the 20 form of which (like attorneys’ fees) will be addressed in subsequent briefing. (See fn. 1, supra.)

21 <sup>7</sup> Contrary to Metropolitan’s erroneous argument in its final footnote, the Water Authority’s 22 request for monetary restitution does not subject its claim for declaratory relief to the claim-23 presentation requirements of the Government Claims Act. (See MOB at pp. 26–27, fn. 14.) The 24 “requirements for presentation of claims apply only to ‘claims for money or damages’ and not to 25 claims for other forms of relief,” including the equitable relief the Water Authority seeks here.
26 (Minsky v. City of Los Angeles (1974) 11 Cal.3d 113, 117, quoting Gov. Code, § 905; see also, 27 e.g., Eureka Teacher’s Assn. v. Board of Education (1988) 202 Cal.App.3d 469, 471; Beach 28 Break, supra, 6 Cal.App.5th at 852; California Bank, supra, 144 Cal.App.2d at p. 390.) In any event, the Water Authority did submit a claim letter to Metropolitan challenging Metropolitan’s “unlawful enforcement” of its RSI clause, disputing “all payments” made “on or after June 23, 2011” for Metropolitan’s water stewardship rate, and seeking, among other things, a “[f]ull refund” of those payments. (Kaplan Decl., Ex. A at pp. 1–2.). Once again, the only waiver here is Metropolitan’s, because it failed to advise the Water Authority of any purported deficiencies in the claim letter. (See Perez v. Golden Empire Transit Dist. (2012) 209 Cal.App.4th 1228, 1234.)
